WETLANDS

On the island you will find bodies of water that as ecosystems fulfill an important function. In them grows the mangrove that performs the most complete filtration process; It is called "the nursery of the ocean" for being vital to the life of the sea.

BIOLUMINESCENCE

At certain times of the year (especially during the summer) a natural phenomenon occurs in the sea called bioluminescence. Which is produced by plankton that with movement generates small trails of light.

SEAGRASS

This is a variety of seaweed and when there are winds and waves, it accumulates on the shore of the beach. Sargassum contains a lot of nutrients that provide food for many species in the oceanic food chain.

*Don't feed the local fauna and don't interrupt in their natural habitat.

WHALE SHARK

The best attraction of our seas, which lives under the harassment of boats and tourists who come from all over the world to meet it. This is the largest fish in the world. When swimming with them, they should not be touched and we suggest using biodegradable sunscreens and sunscreen to avoid damaging your ecosystem. (Jun. To Sept)

PINK FLAMINGO

They arrive from other places, here they have a rest and feeding area, they are very nervous and any noise scares them. Close to the beach, it is recommended to keep distance and silence to avoid altering their surroundings. In Punta Mosquito and Punta Cocos you can admire perfectly.

TURTLES

Holbox has the only hawksbill nesting beach (endangered) in Quintana Roo. From June to November the turtles are released; which is when the hatchlings leave the sand towards the sea.
